

The PRINCIPLES OF WAR as PARADOX

U.S. MARINE CORPS (JAMES L. VOORHEIS)

Colonel Christopher R. Paparone, U.S. Army and Dr. James A. Crupi

In the confusion of the modern battlefield, commanders need to know when to let subordinates seize the initiative and when to exercise tight command and control. Sometimes they must do both simultaneously. Understanding these and other contradictory impulses is the key to success.

First Place Winner, Principles of War Essay Contest

